MILLION DOLLARS IN BUILDINGS FOR CITY PAST YEAR

Includes Erection Of Hotel Cumberland School Buildings And About 300 Frame Houses In Local Community.

AUTHENTIC BUILDING RECORDS NOT KEPT ON CITY BOOKS

Nearly 300 frame houses have been built in Middlesboro and vicinity this year, according to lumber dealers who have sold lumber to the value of almost half a million dollars. The year has also seen the completion of the magnificent Hotel Cumberland which was erected at a cost of a quarter of a million and the virtual completion of the new high school building which is valued at approximately $100,000 Also four grade school buildings were built.

Authentic building statistics as regards the number of houses constructed in this vicinity are impossible to obtain owing to the fact that records of the building permits are not kept in the city except as they appear in the minutes of the city council meetings. In the surrounding mining camps it is understood that they are not kept at all However, the quantity of lumber sold will give a fair estimate, most of this being used in the construction of frame houses

The local number dealers expressed the opinion that approximately a million dollars have been spent in building and improvements this year. Houses constructed of brick or material other than lumber were of materials obtained elsewhere so that it is impossible to get a check on them

Though building activities fall short of the mark made last year owing to the railroad and mine strikes it has been far better than the dealers had hoped for. With the industrial conditions practically readjusted, the outlook for the coming year is unsurpassed.

The fact that the price of lumber has begun to soar is, in itself, evidence that great demands are being made on this building product.

PINEVILLE STORE GIVES TOYS TO POOR CHILDREN

Special to The News.

PINEVILLE, Dec 28—The Stannard-Hubme-Haddon company in a spirit of kindly feeling for the little tots of the city who might not otherwise have been remembered by Santa Claus, presented all the toys left in their toy shop at 8 o'clock Saturday evening, to be distributed among the unfortunate. The distribution was generously undertaken by the Kiwanis club. The Kiwanis club has already donated a large number of Christmas baskets and had on their list most all of those in the city who were needy

250 POOR KIDDIES ATTEND CHRISTMAS TREE PROGRAM HERE

Candy And Toys Make Children Happy At Salvation Army Program Last Night At City Hall.

NOT ENOUGH TOYS TO GO AROUND THIS YEAR

Over 250 children were made happy by the Salvation Army Christmas tree and entertainment at the city hall last night. Clothing, toys fruits, candies contributed by local business men were liberally distributed to the youngsters whom Santa Claus had apparently forgotten

A feature of the musical enterrainment was two solos rendered by Capt M. E. Cuthbert Tabouline and scarf drills, religious tableaux and other forms of yuletide entertainment were enjoyed The children were happy when the presents were distributed.

Among the articles given out were 300 garments consisting of underclothing sweaters shoes, slippers and dresses for women Each child was given a bag containing candy nuts oranges and apples About 200 toys were distributed, not enough having been donated to provide each child

The event was a splendid success through the generous aid of the following business men and firms each of whom contributed to the present for the children Ginsburg Department Store, Ensfer Bros, Wilson's T Russ Hill W. R. Strange, Warren P Rash, Ralston Confectionery and many others

HI-Y CLUB WOULD DO GOOD IN CITY

Organization Would Tend To Keep High School Boys Interested In Better Sports, Claimed.

That a boys' Hi-Y club in Middlesboro would help to keep the town cleaned up and keep interest in Sunday school and church as well as to create a friendly spirit among boys of the same age is the opinion of the Rev. E F Burnside, pastor of the First M. E. church.

Rev. Burnside recently came here from Corbin where he was head of one of the most active Hi-Y clubs in the state One of the most interesting things the boys successfully put over for their own amusement in Corbin, he says, was a series of indoor baseball games There were thirty-three high school boys in the club Every boy in the club went to Sunday School each Sunday

Where the use of a gymnasium is available boxing is one of the sports recommended for the boys.

At one time in Corbin, Rev. Burnside says the boys had races on the baseball diamond and the boys were excited when he happened to make the diamond in ten seconds.

If a Hi-Y club is organized here soon Rev. Burnside says, Middlesboro may be able to get the annual state Hi-Y Club conference in the spring.

To perfect such an organization he suggests that it be done through the churches and the school and that a leader be chosen from among the competent local men.

500 CARS SOLD HERE PAST YEAR

Autos To Value Of Half Million Have Gone Out From Local Dealers Spells Prosperity

New automobiles to the value of half a million dollars have been sold in Middlesboro and vicinity during 1922 Allowing a conservative estimate for an agency on the outskirts of town that was not consulted in compiling these figures, 500 new cars have been sold during the year. Dealers are of the opinion that approximately this amount of used cars has also been disposed of by them

Practically all of the dealers report a large increase in the business of this year over that of last Those whose sales did not exceed the figures of 1921 were handicapped by transportation conditions which made delivery of cars impossible.

Prospects for a good business in 1923 are reported by all the agencies Sales will necessarily be somewhat slow during the hard winter months, but with the opening of spring it is expected that an unprecedented trade in automotive vehicles will be experienced

In no more forceful manner could the general prosperity of this section be reflected than by the stimulation of the sales in automobiles, vehicles that are usually deemed a luxury.

National automobile statistics which have been compiled for this year thus far indicate that general business conditions in this line have been far better than on previous years not excepting the years during which the world war was in progress.

RECEIVE 14 CARLOADS OF WHISKEY AT CYNTHIA, KY.

(From Cynthiana Democrat)

CYNTHIA, KY., Dec. 28—Monday and Tuesday, the T. S. Ashbrook Distillery Co. Cynthiana, received 14 carloads of whiskey from the Paxton Bros. and Bond Bros. distilleries, near Lawrenceburg, sent here for storage in accordance with the government concentration plan The Ashbrook plant is one of the few in Kentucky selected by the government for storage The whiskey was heavily guarded enroute and while being unloaded here

In the consignment were 983 barrels, 17 of them empty, the whiskey having been stolen in numerous raids on Lawrenceburg distilleries The government requires the barrels remain stored whether anything is in them or not.

The most recent raid on the Bond Bros plant occurred last week when the guards were captured and bound, and the thieves leisurely syphoned the whiskey from the barrels to kegs A truck with 36 10-gallon kegs of whiskey was captured at Shelbyville after the raid, as noticed in this paper last week. No doubt some of the 170 empties brought to Cynthiana were among those present during the raid The whiskey captured at Shelbyville is being held by the prohibition officers.

Legless Man To Die On Gallows

LIONEL EDWARD SYMONDS IN THE ARMS OF THE OFFICER WHO MAY CARRY HIM TO THE GALLOWS

By Milton Bronner.

LONDON, Dec 28—A legless man 22 years old, will soon be carried to the gallows to pay the penalty for a constructive murder.

It took the jury only 18 minutes to find him guilty Yet he never could have been convicted for such a crime in the United States.

If two persons enter a death pact, and one survives, can he be charged with murder?

The British law says yes Popular opinion, backed by some leading barristers, say no.

In the balance hangs the life of the cripple. Unless sufficient sentiment is aroused to win a commutation of sentence he will soon be carried to the scaffold in the arms of a policeman for his part in an unfortunate love affair

Although Lionel Edward Symonds, a baker of Bersham, was married and had two children he fell in love with Gladys Martha Wall, the 15 year old daughter of his employer Fearing the inevitable consequences they decided to end it all by throwing themselves in front of a train

Change of Mind.

But the girl became frightened and shortly before the time set for the execution of their death pact, she wrote:

"I shall not go to the train tonight because I don't wish to die like that. I would rather you killed me."

The man replied:

"Dear it must be the train. I could not do it myself. Then we go together."

The day after the girl's mutilated body was found on the railway track and nearby was Symonds with both legs so badly crushed his feet had to be amputated

On the stand the cripple admitted his love for the girl and their talk and notes about jumping in front of the train But he said he changed his mind and wanted to live

He met her told her, urged her not to be silly. But she was distracted and ran towards the track down which the train was thundering, and half mad with fright, he ran after her.

That was all that he remembered.

A THOUGHT

Your Father knoweth what things ye have need of.—Matthew 6:8.

No man is either worthy of a good home here or a heaven hereafter that is not worthy to be in peril for a good cause.—John Brown of Osawatomie.

RADICAL OR REACTIONARY?

A curious instance of the attachment to words of a significance that does not properly obtain is found in the popular misuse of the word "radical," which as now generally used signifies one who believes in violent and destructive attacks on society and government. To the average citizen the term "radical" is associated with something sinister, savoring of plots and bombs, and in conservative circles the word as applied to men or policies carries its own condemnation. So far has the new connotation gone that it is assumed as a matter of course that the idea underlying the word radical is equivalent to destruction or revolution, and that fastening the name upon a party or group indicates that it is considered outside the bounds of orderly and peaceful agitation.

There is in reality no justification for his departure from the established values of a word which means simply, as its Latin origin indicates, one who believes in seeking the root or basis of recognized social imperfections and proposes remedies based on a thorough knowledge of fundamentals. This is the method of wisdom, as understood ever since the days of Aristole, and there is no good reason why its advocates should be stigmatized as dangerous citizens. They may be wrong in their analysis of conditions, and their remedies may therefore be worthless, but they are not necessarily criminal because of their mistakes.

An illustration of the misuse of the term is found in its application to the Communist regime in Russia, which is almost universally described as a Red Radical Government. The truth is that the group of theorists who rule Russia today are not radicals, but reactionaries. They have abandoned the fundamentals of democracy and self-government toward which political institutions in all civilized countries have been slowly progressing, and have gone back to the harsh despotism of rule by organized force of arms. The 150,000,000 Russians were not consulted when the Bolsheviki overthrew the constitutional Kerensky government, and today have no voice in the management of public affairs. The Soviet leaders showed that they had no perception of the deeply-rooted institution of property rights when they sought to abolish private ownership. They had failed, and are now gradually returning to this theory, i. e. triumph of radicalism against reaction. The preachers of violent revolution and confiscation are in no sense radicals, but manifestly reactionaries.

LOVE SECRETS.

Frequently people are only in love with love, when they imagine they love a certain person. They crave for an ideal on whom they can lavish affections. Very often, they are mistaken in believing that a given person perfectly fits that ideal.

When discovery comes, the disillusioned one sometimes grows moody, occasionally insane with disappointment. Then suicide is a danger.

In other cases, where mental control is better, the person merely says "Well, I made a mistake. I pinned my ideal on the wrong party."

Nothing except from one to three years of married life can definitely determine whether the union is a fusion of two ideal loves.

After the honeymoon, we begin coming down out of the clouds. The agate hard side of life roughly elbows thru the mists of romance. Delusions and illusions vanish. Lucky, then, is the couple that finds it hasn't made a mistake.

That's why a girl's mother is always more or less worried during the first year of her daughter's wedded life.

Time is the acid test in love, as in all things, and nothing can serve as substitute.

However, there is one certain way by which most of the danger of wedding the wrong person can be avoided. That way is for both man and woman to act naturally and without affectation, during courtship. If the romance is cunningly staged, each trying to conceal his or her peculiarities or weaknesses from the other, the road is being paved for disillusion and disappointment after the glamours of the honeymoon.

The person who is always perfect is not apt to get into a situation where he or she can be accused of arriving under false pretenses.

Berton Braley's Daily Poem

LIGHTS

By Berton Braley

Mountains have mighty magic, the sea has a wondrous lure,
And the spell of the desert places is a spell that will long endure,
But deep in the hearts of the city bred is a love too great to pen,
For the lights, the lights of the city, that summon them home again.

Though the sons of the roaring city shall roam to the ends of earth,
Straining in work and battle, ailing in love and mirth;
As the darkness falls about them, they shall peer across the skies,
For the lights of the city, to gladden their homesick eyes.

And they in their sleep shall vision the glamorous streets that glow,
With the lamps of ten thousand motor cars that scurry to and fro.
And the flare and glare of the blazing signs where the rushing crowd goes by,
In the lights, the lights of the city, that flaunt against the sky.

When once their wonder grips you you shall no more be free,
They wield enchantment greater than mountains, waste, or sea.
Though you wander the wild world over to the farthermost haunts of mine,
The lights, the lights of the city, shall summon you home again!

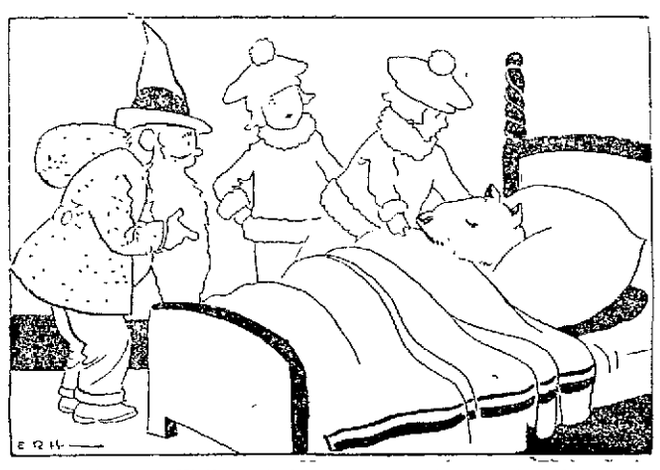
Adventures of The Twins

By Olive Roberts Barton



They put Wally to bed and tucked him in with blankets.

After Wally Woodchuck went Nancy and Nick and Dusty Coat, the fairyman.

They had seen Wally's tracks in the snow, although that fat little groundhog should have been in Dreamland long ago. It certainly was no weather for a person who felt the cold as much as Wally did.

Every once in a while they could see where Wally had sat up on his hind legs, for the snow was soft and showed where his plump little body had flattened it down.

"Ah ha!" remarked Dusty Coat. "Stopped to blow on his fingers, did he? Well, the weather will be still colder and more than his fingers will be frostbitten if he remains around this meadow any longer. I'll have to see to it that he leaves at once and takes his family. Come along, children, we will have to hunt up this fellow at his house between the wheat field and the potato patch."

So off they all started again.

By and by they came to Wally's front door and rang the bell. And Wally himself answered it.

"Oh, hello," he said. "I didn't know who it was. Not very many people come to see me these days, it's getting so chilly."

"Too chilly for your health, Wally," said Dusty Coat. "Hadn't you better go to a warmer place? Pretty soon Ripple Creek and Lily Pond will be all frozen up and what will you do for a drink? And you liking water so well and everything. And there won't be a bite to eat."

"Where'd I go to?" grumbled Wally.

"Dreamland of course."

"But I don't want to go to sleep," protested Wally. "That's no fun. I—I—"

Suddenly Wally's head began to nod and in another instant he was snoring. Dusty Coat had blown a puff of magic dust into the air and the fat little Woodchuck had breathed it in.

They put Wally to bed and tucked him in blankets.

"Now he can't freeze," declared Dusty Coat.

THE ONE-MAN WOMAN

By Ruth Agnes Abeling.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

KATE WARD, following her husband's death, returned from the great city to the village of her childhood to care for her widower father, JUSTIN PARSONS. To their little home came

CHINATOWN ALICE, with the story that Kate's dead husband

DAN WARD, was the father of Alice's child

DOROTHY. Later comes the news that the little girl is seriously ill. Kate leaves to see Alice, to investigate and to determine what must be done.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

Sitting there in the coach, watching the Wabash roll lazily along, Kate Ward smiled at the vision the little town of Riverton called forth.

The chautauqua had closed. Her mother intended to go home by train. Kate had been allowed to drive home with Tom Malloy, who made no secret of the fact that he loved Kate, and who, since he was the son of a well-to-do farmer, was considered a catch for some lucky girl.

Small, raft-like ferry boats, operated by one man by means of a wire stretched across the river, carried vehicles from one bank to the other.

It was a little after eight—a wonderful August evening—when Kate and Tom called the ferryman. The boat was at anchor on the other side of the river.

There was no response to Tom's call, nor to others which followed at intervals. Finally he went up to the ferry man's home. The place was dark. He was unable to arouse anyone.

The operator supposing there would be little traffic crossing the river that night, since the chautauqua had closed in the forenoon, had taken the evening for his own amusement and left his boat unattended.

"I'll have to cross the river by trestle. Don't be afraid—you can trust Ben," said Tom as he started away.

Ben was Tom's horse, a sorrel, who loved Tom to the point of worship for Tom's sake included Kate in his affection.

Tom tarted across the river on foot. Kate heard his running feet on the ties of the restle as she waited, half fearful, in the dark. Finally she heard the splash of water. Tom had started the ferry boat. When he landed she drove Ben on to the raft and held him while Tom, by means of the wire and propeller, pulled the boat back to the Illinois share.

Then they drove on over the moonlit Illinois prairie to Palestine.

Kate thrilled as she thought of Tom. He was now a prosperous attorney in a northern state. He had loved her in a fine, clean way. That was something at least. Something fine and good in the past is always an anchor in a troubled present.

The train was pulling into Sullivan when she awakened from the dream.

It was quite a distance from the railroad station to the place where the interurban cars stopped in front of the Sullivan hotel, so Kate took the bus, which made the trip four times daily, with a motley array of travelers.

The interurban car, waiting when the bus arrived, rattled speedily over the intervening miles.

It was three o'clock in the afternoon when Kate made her way through the crowds at the station and sought a hotel where she engaged a room.

The city lay hot under the rays of a sun which had been shining steadily from early morning. The heat of the concrete sidewalks struck through the soles of her satin pumps as she walked along Wabash avenue.

At length she turned into Fourth street toward the laundry of Sing Loy where she knew she would find Alice.

Ten thousand little worries
Plucked at my skirt to stay
Within the house and tend them;
The trees all called "Away!"

Just see our radiant garments
That sway in singing flames,
And hear the happy piping
Of crickets at their games.

So I locked my doors and windows,
I fled on dancing feet
Far down the aisles of beauty
And oh, my way was sweet.

And when in the haunting twilight
I opened wide my door.
Up the chimney they had climbed—
My worries were no more.

POLK DOT SAVAGES ADDED THRILL TO TRIP OF GOWENS

Palm Island Population Pick Skin Until It Bleeds Then Put On Wads Of Cotton To Make Desired Costume Design.

NATIVES CRAWL ON HANDS AND KNEES WWHEN MOURNING

By Mrs. Jean Gowen As Told To Alexander Herman for NEA Service.

Rounding the Australian coast, we ran into worse weather of the trip.

Our little Speejicks was tossed about as if it were a toy.

Our captain, a hardy seaman, who had never been ill in his life, became sick. And I took a vacation in a hospital when we reached Brisbane.

Along the Australian coast we stopped at Palm Island, where I made friends with some aborigonals, who look like polka dots.

They prick their skin till it bleeds and then put on wads of cotton to make the design of the costume they desire.

When we got back to the mainland the crowds that visited our boat often became so heavy that we were in danger of listing. It's strange how much interest we aroused.

We have received more than 5,000 letters from people, including some confidential notes to my husband telling him that the writer would make him a better companion than his wife.

We found New Guinea the most uncivilized place in all the world.

The married women have their heads When in mourning the natives paint their bodies a deep black and crawl around on their hands and knees for six months

On an inland excursion there I rode on a little seat carried by six stalwart men. As long as I smiled the men kept moving and singing. But as soon as I would stop smiling they would quit walking. By the end of the trip I was as tired as I have ever been and my face was almost petrified into a smile.

Head hunters and cannibals were all around us. But we go through all right.

Between Java and Singapore we ran into several typhoons.

We were royally entertained wherever we went.

The trip across the Indian Ocean—which is larger than the Atlantic—was made during the monsoon season.

India Arabia. Egypt, were on our itinerary and we visited all of them.

We were maintaining our schedule so well that my husband was able to cable ahead just what time we would reach New York.

After making our stops along the Mediterranean, we headed straight for home.

The best part of the trip, I suppose, was the run across the Atlantis.

We were due in New York at 11 o'clock in the morning. We tied up at our pier at three minutes after.

Not so bad after a 35,000 mile cruise was it?

A Far-Sighted Banker's Idea of Advertising

By FESTUS J. WADE

President Mercantile Trust Company of St. Louis

DO I believe that a banker considers reputation, as developed by advertising, in extending credit? There probably are bankers who will give a negative answer to this question and believe they are giving the right answer.

But let those bankers be approached by a credit-seeking national advertiser, who has established his name, therefore a market for his goods, and see what happens. In nine cases out of ten the fact that those goods have become a household "buyword" will be the greatest factor in granting the credit.

The banker himself will have become subconsciously sold on the firm, thro' its consistent advertising. He will say, "O, yes, that's a big house—well known, a good reputation," etc., not realizing that it was advertising that did the work.

The next minute he may be approached by a new company, trying to make its name, and turn down the loan because too much of it is to be spent for the purpose of advertising. In the first application he has helped the big advertiser to cash in on his reputation, and in the second was depriving the newcomer of the right to build a reputation. This is only a hypothetical case, and I am glad to say I don't believe it happens as often as it did in the past. Just as we learn something new every day, so every day a banker wakes up to the underlying power and pull of advertising.

SIX STAGES IN ONE TO SHOW PLAY

By James W. Dean

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—It takes six stages in one to show what Ben-Ami is thinking about in "Johannes Kreisler." This dramatic novelty is the latest conversational self-starter on Broadway.

The play is presented by means of a mechanical contraption invented by Sven Gade who closely guards its secret. By a unique division of the stage and novel lighting effects he is able to present 42 scenes in less than two hours and a half.

The play deals with a composer, whose imaginative life is as real to him as his actual life. He can not distinguish one from the other and by means of the kaleidoscopic changes of scenes the audience is enabled to see his meental processes depicted on the stage in dramatic form. The result is most fantastic melodrama of the season.

The story is based on the life and writings of E. T. A. Hoffman. It is Carl Meinhard and Rudolf Bernauer and has run almost two years in Berlin. It was translated into English by Louis N. Parker for the Selwyns and is being produced under the direction of Frank Reicher who spent several weeks in Berlin with the authors and Gade.

Jacob Ben-Ami plays the title role and Lotus Blobb plays the various women who embody the ideal of Johannes Kreisler. A ballet of 100 directed by Fokine takes part. The interpolative music, which is as important as the dramatic element, was devised by E. N. von Resnicek from Hoffman's "Undine" and Mozart's "Don Juan."

All the cream on milk must be vanishing cream because you seldom see any cream on milk.

Absence of short skirts makes the men's necks grow longer.

What is so rare as a hot day in winter?

Pedestrians are getting so particular they want to be run over by an expensive car, not a cheap car.

MORTALITY FROM TYPHOID FEVER FOR YEAR 1921.

*WASHINGTON, Dec. 28—The De*partment of Commerce, through the Bureau of Census, announces that there were over eight thousand deaths from typhoid fever in 1921 in the registration area, which comprises 82 per cent of the total population of the United States. The death rate from this disease was 9 per 100 000 population in 1921 as compared with 7.8 in 1920.

Of the 34 states shown for 1921 and 1920, only 9 show lower rates in 1921 than in 1920, as follows:

California, 1921, 4.3; 1920 4.8. Connecticut 1921, 3.6; 1920, 4.1, Maine, 1921, 7.6; 1920 7.9; Michigan, 1921 7.7 1920, 7.9; Montana, 1921 3.5, 1920, 4.8; New Hampshire, 1921, 3.6, 1920, 6.8; North Carolina, 1921, 12.6, 1920, 12.5, Vermont, 1921, 5.4, 1920, 10.5, Washington, 1921, 5.4, 1920, 5.6

In 1921 Rhode Island had the lowest adjusted rate (2.6 per 100000 population), while South Carolina had the highest (26.5).

Of the 11 stats showing rates by color, the lowest adjusted rate for the white population in 1921 was 3.6 and the lowest for the colored was 1.9 both for New York State, while the highest adjusted rate for the white population was 24.8 for Kentucky and for the colored 40.7 for Tennessee.

For the 27 states contained in the registration area of 1917 the death rate from typhoid fever per 100,000 population was 14.5 in 1917, 12.6 in 1918, 9.2 in 1919, 7, in 1920 and 7.8 in 1921.

"Lays" It To The Tariff.

Said the big red rooster
To the little brown hen:
"This egg shell's too thin,
Don't do it again."

Said the little brown hen:
"I've got to go slow;
Lime's so expensive—
The Tariff you know."

GERMANY, 1923

GERMAN ROYALISTS HARD AT WORK TO RESTORE THRONE

"Der Tag" Is Day They Will Overthrow Republic—Used To Be Day When Kaiserist Germany Planned To Beat France.

"UNDER KAISER YOUR WAGES WENT FARTHER"

By Milton Bronner, NEA Staff Correspondent.

BERLIN, Dec 28—Officially when time, place and officials permit, secretly when the reverse is true, German Monarchists work for restoration of throne.

In favored places like White Bavaria they are very bold. Berlin and Redder Saxony have secret organizations.

'Der Tag' used to be the day of which the Kaiserist Germany was to declare war and beat France, England and any other countries that stood in the path of German monarchical plans.

'Der Tag' is now the day upon which they will overturn the republic and substitute for it the old monocled swaggering Junker clan.

Time, circumstance and condition so play into their hands that the Monarchists are making substantial gains.

To those who feel Germany hasn't a friend, they say: 'You drove out the kaiser and got the Versailles treaty with its cup of humiliation."

To the workmen: "Under the kaiser your wages went farther."

To the small business man: "Under the Hohenzollerns you never had to pay such monetary tribute.'

The Monarchists have press, pamphleteers book writers.

A snuffy Bavarian professor in a Berlin university repeats that Germans are so constituted that they must have a boss.

The old newspaper Kreuz Zeitung, appearing as the New Preussische Zeitung, restores the iron cross to its title head, with the motto: Forward with God for King and Country. This in the capital of the German republic.

In the Reichstag the Monarchists have deputies. Among the 459 members the coal democrats lead with 173, the Central Party has 68, the German Peoples Party 68. This latter is the party of the Junkers and Monarchists. Its Reichstag leader is Karl Helfferich.

Not part of the National Peoples Party, but playing the Monarchist game are organizations whose name is legion.

Then there are such secret organizations as brought about the murders of Erzberger and Rathenau.

After these murders the government passed laws for the republic's safety. These laws have brought the republic and the Bavarian government into sharp dispute. The latter has looked with benevolent eyes upon serious organizations whose aim is to say the least, anti-republican.

Bavaria insists upon self-government, home rule. This undoubtedly has the support of the mass of Bavarians.

One of the recent Bavarian developments was formation of the National Socialists. They are not Socialists. They are Monarchists. It has been openly charged they have organized storm troops and secreted weapons.

Mussolini's success with his Fascisti in combating the Italian Socialis has brought new ambitions to the National Socialists. They dream of a movement which shall spread over Germany as the Fascisti spread over Italy. It would end the republic and restore the Monarchists. The other day in the Bavarian Landtag one of them raised the cry—"Long Live the King"

More recently the German government issued decrees against student societies in lyceums and universities, whose existence it deemed a menace to the state—societies dominated by sons of Junker families, of old officers now without fat jobs.

But the trouble, even outside of Bavaria, is that the government is never sure it has accomplished its purpose. It dissolved the Orgesch, a semi-military society, and practically the next day there was formed a union of ex-members of the Orgesch.

There is never any lack of money to engineer these organizations. The Hohenzollerns give none. The exiled kaiser is too greedy; his sons too fond up. The money comes from the Junkers owners of big estates in Pomerania, Brandenburg, Hanover, East Prussia. The hard times do not bother them. Their potatoes, rye, wheat and hay have brought top prices. Their farms are constantly working for the Kaiser's family.

Cause of Divorce

Ugly? Mrs Edythe Kispert of Los Angeles alleged in her divorce petition that her husband said her face was so ugly he couldn't stand looking at it ever day. Divorce granted.

Here's a Safe "Triangle"

"A wife, a dog and a pipe form the only safe triangle for any man," declared Superior Court Judge R. N. Hardeman of Atlanta, in a jury charge recently. So the Atlanta bar presented him with a pipe and a dog for Christmas to complete his triangle. Picture shows Judge Hardeman, Mrs. Hardeman and the other "angles."

Glass of Salts Cleans Kidneys

If your Back hurts or Bladder bothers you, drink lots of water.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract.

Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulate them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it is no longer a source of irritation, thus often ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; can not injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink, which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

CREAM FOR CATARRH OPENS UP NOSTRILS

Tells How To Get Quick Relief from Head-Colds. It's Splendid!

In one minute your clogged nostrils will open, the air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffling, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night; your cold or catarrh will be gone.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed-up with a cold or nasty catarrh—Relief comes so quickly.
